Attractions Coming To Washington

At the New National Theater next week, June 14, the Aborns will present as the eighth of their comic operas. "The Serenade." Possibly no American light opera has a warmer place in the affections of the majority of music lovers and few will admit that Victor Herbert ever wrote more charming music than the haunting melodies which make up the score of "The Serenade."

For the production here the Aborns will offer another of the big casts that have marked all of this season's productions. Among the principals who will be seen in the cast will be William Shuster, Forrest Huff, Fritzie Ven Busing, George Shieaus, Albert Parr, Phil Branson, Madge North, Estelle Wentworth, and Frank Wooley.

From the sprightliness of Scotch comedy, exemplified in this week's offering of "Kitty MacKay." the Poli Players will turn next week to a musical comedy of decidedly American flavor—George M. Cohan's "The Little Millionaire."

"The Little Millionaire" was the musical comedy selected by Mr. Cohan to open the George M. Cohan Theater, in New York, several years ago, and the author and composer played the title role. It was a unique combination of author, composer, producer, star, and theater owner all in one individual. It scored an immediate success, and ran for a whole season.

Next week at Poli's "The Little Millionaire" will afford the leading man and leading woman their first opportunity to appear in a musial production since coming to Washington.

Beginning next Sunday afterneon.

Beginning next Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the Columbia Theater will offer as a special attraction Daniel Frohman's elaborate photo production of Hall Caine's novel and play. "The Eternal City."

This production has had the benefit of many wonderful scenic effects because the backgrounds of much of the action are historic buildings in Rome in keeping with the spirit of the great story. Fauline Frederick will be seen as the heroine. An augmented Columbia orchestra will play the incidental music.

The Columbia stage setting for "The Eternal City" will be peculiarly in keeping with the production, and the play will be projected on the largest screen ever set up in Washington.

Fritzi Scheff, who scaled the starry heights in light operas and musical comedies, will be presented here next week for the first time in Keith Vaudeville. The Viennese prima donna comedienne will employ all her chic and chafm in a quintet of songs, some from former operatic successes.

Others of headline rating will be Gladys Clark and Henry Bergman, in their new hit, "A Basetail Flirtation. Craig Campbell, Wyatt's Scotch Lads and Laseles, Eddie Cantor and A. Lee, Julie Ring and company, Keit and De Mont in "College Nonsense," and other supporting acts, forming a ten-number program.

At Moore's Strand Theater next week the principal attraction for the first four days will be a photoplay of Cyrus Townsend Brady's novelette, "The Island Regeneration," featuring Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno. The story is all very beautifully told in the picture, and two of the most stirring scenes depict a fire at sea and an earthquake.

The remainder of the week will be divided between two Mutual Masterpictures exploiting well-known stage stars, in addition to Keystone comedies, the Strand Topical Review, and appropriate musical accompaniments by the Strand Symphony Orchestra.

At Moore's Garden Theater next week rom Sunday to Wednesday Franxis X. Sushman and Ruth Stonehouse will be seen in a film version of George Ade's
"The Slim Princess." The plot of this unusually whimsical story deals with a

LEADS TO HIS ARREST

William Bender Tells Police He Entered House Because the Window Was Left Open.

Men who enter other people's houses early in the morning should leave their hats outside or tie them on, for a hat left behind in a hurry landed William Bender, twenty-six years old, in a cell at the Second precinct station today. Charles E. Jacobsen, who lives at 17 N street northwest, heard some one moving around in his house shortly after midnight, and concluded that some one was "playing" with the silverware. He slipped out of the house to a neighbor-

The intruder fied.

When Detective Ladow reached the house Jacobsen handed him a hat which the man had left behind in his haste. After covering several blocks Ladow saw Bender walking along bareheaded in the cool morning air. The hat fit snugly. Bender was taken to the police station, where the police say he admitted entering the house, but said he saw the window open and went inside to tell the owner about it. He came to Washington recently from Ohio.
